Navigating the new landscape of European gambling laws in a post Green Paper era

The gambling and gaming industry is undergoing a turbulent period of change - given the current multitude of legal battles, unclear legislation and a distinct lack of harmonization across the industry, the need for legal clarity is evident.

The very nature of online playing has propelled the gambling industry towards a pan-European culture, and the demand for legal transparency is intensifying. The reactions to the European Commission's recently publicized Green Paper on Online Gambling in the Internal Market are eagerly anticipated, and should shed some light on whether different national regulatory models can realistically co-exist, or whether now is the time to establish a harmonised EU-wide framework.

However the industry is still playing the guessing game as to whether the Green Paper will be soft law or a real directive. The recent situation with Full Tilt has turned a spotlight on the on-going European debate between regulators over how best to guarantee the safety of player's deposits. And with ambiguity surrounding issues such as state aid rules and access to markets, regulators and stakeholders alike are caught up in a minefield of legal battles.

Add to this the significant amount of revenue to be generated in the sector, with the Spanish market estimated to be worth up to €250m and the Greek grey market at around €210m to €260m, is it any wonder the examination over regulation and gambling at the European level is intensifying?

You know assessing and moving into new markets is not a simple process and costly mistakes can be made if you are not fully prepared on legalisation. Keeping up to speed on numerous challenges like security, consumer protection, payment processing, social responsibility is a frustrating yet essential necessity.

Against a backdrop of uncertainty surrounding the Green Paper and cautious plans for new market entry, the Legal Gaming in Europe conference is perfectly timed to arm your business with the legal know how you need to navigate this constantly shifting landscape.

Ensure Your Business Is Best Prepared For European Gaming Success

Back in its 6th blockbusting year, the Legal Gaming in Europe conference is the must attend event for everyone who is looking to cement their position in existing markets and planning to enter new markets.

Let this year's stellar industry line-up of speakers guide you through the legal minefield and give unique insights and expert analysis, including:

- The European Commission discuss the responses they've received on the Green Paper, what they anticipate the next steps will be and how it will impact your business
- Euromat assess the Green Paper and detail their stance on maintaining a healthy business and legal environment in the EU for the gaming sector
- Regulators from key European jurisdictions, including Spain, Denmark and Germany. Get the latest information on which products can be offered, tax framework in place, commitment to responsible gaming and licensing models available.
- Hear from top Legal Experts who will give you country-by-country analysis on closed, open and opening markets across Europe, allowing you to evaluate how country tax frameworks and licensing models will affect your strategy plans
- Operator Case Studies - gain unique insights from operators and legal advisors and discover how cases were fought, what costs were incurred and the lessons they've learnt

If you've attended any of our previous events, you know this is no anonymous expo. It's an event with a proven pedigree of attendees from within the legal gaming space. As an exclusive high-level meeting you are assured of meeting only the leading legal gaming minds. Quite apart from the vast amount of knowledge and expertise that is always on offer, there are other excellent reasons for making sure you're among the delegates in 2012:
